Fur trader and an Inuk. Fur trader are Hudson's Bay Company worker, a manager. And the Inuk would hunt or trap any kind of animal that has fur to trade for dry goods such as flour, tea, biscuits, ammunition, sugar, dry milk, and the fur trader collected fox fur, wolf fur, rabbits, weasels, and once the fur trader found out that the Inuk can carve soapstone, fur trader’s start buying carved soapstone. An Inuk here is wearing a fur pelt and probably seal skin kamiks, boots. And the fur trader is wearing rubber boots, material clothing, and they are trading for dried goods for them to eat. And they also traded boats, kerosene for your common stove. This was to make a living and to help feed the Inuk’s family.
